

Disreputable House at Frankfort Out of Business; Keeper Out on $1000 Bond

The disreputable house which has been in operation on the old Peter Scheer farm north of Frankfort the past six weeks has passed into oblivion. Since the recent citizens raid on this place and the arrest of the keeper and inmates, the place has been closed. The forepart of this week the furnishings of the joint were removed and the building is now vacant.

Mary Allen and Tony Longue, who were arrested in the disorderly house, have been released on bonds of $1000 each, signed by Joseph Koehalka of Joliet. The bonds were approved by Acting County Judge H. F. Ruel.

The Allen woman is charged with being the keeper. Two other women taken in the raid are still in the county jail as inmates of a disorderly house.

The two in jail attempted to gain release by getting a surety company to furnish bonds. When local representatives of the surety firm failed to show any power of attorney giving them the right to sign the bonds for the company, Assistant State's Attorney James E. Burke of Will County, objected to the acceptance of the bond by the court, and the women are still in custody.

Cases of two other men arrested in the raid and which were to have been tried before Judge Frank J. Kohlhausen at Frankfort Wednesday afternoon, have been continued for ten days on the recommendation of State's attorney H. Rehn and Attorney A. H. Krusemark.

New Lenox Votes Down Two New School Sites

A new school house has been a big talking point in New Lenox for the past few years. The present school is inadequate for the rapidly growing community and a new modern school is bound to come sooner or later.

The school board had contemplated the erection of a portable school house, but an injunction was taken out restraining the board from carrying out the plan.

Of late an agitation has been on foot for a new school site. Two locations were favored, one being the corner lot across from the Archie Corp store. This lot is owned by Fred Warning of Frankfort. In addition to this the purchase of the M. E. parsonage property next to the Warning lot was favored, but the combined cost of the two properties would total $10,000. The other site was 7 acres in the Osmus subdivision south of New Lenox at $4500. The two contemplated sites and the question whether the local school board should be given the right to purchase a school site were submitted to the voters of New Lenox at a special election last Saturday and all three propositions on the ballot went down in defeat, the vote being 61 in favor and 69 votes against the propositions. The contention of the majority of New Lenox is that the present school site comprising about two acres is large enough for a new school house and play ground. The idea of a new school house is not being opposed, but the purchase of a new site is from the way the people look at the situation is this: The district can raise $27,000 for a new school building but if $10,000 or $4500 is taken off of this amount there is not enough money left to start a new building on. For the present the old school will have to be used. This fall three teachers will be engaged to teach the large number of students enrolled.

Circulate Petition To Incorporate

Its continued steady growth is beginning to make New Lenox feel it ought to take on city airs and incorporate. As a result of this a petition is being circulated so the matter can be brought before the voters of the village at a special election, but just when this will be done is not known.

Mokena Girl Marries Joliet Man

The marriage of Miss Marguerite Wachter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Wachter of Mokena, and Robert Welch, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Welch, 504 Western Ave., Joliet, took place at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning at the St. John Catholic church, Joliet.

The bride's sister Miss Frances Wachter served as maid of honor, while Earl Welch, a brother of the bridegroom was best man.

Immediately after the church ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served to a small company of relatives and friends in Snapp's cafeteria. Later Mr. and Mrs. Welch departed for a short trip and on their return plan to reside in Joliet.

Mokena Defeats New Lenox 4 to 1

The baseball game between New Lenox and Mokena on the Schiek diamond at Mokena Sunday drew a good sized crowd of base ball fans. The game was won by Mokena with a score of 4 to 1. Mokena got to Baird, pitcher for New Lenox early in the game and with a 4 run lead Ryba pitching for Mokena had little trouble taking care of New Lenox. Mokena travels to Orland this coming Sunday with the hopes of bringing back a second victory, having beat Orland once at Mokena. All fans who attend this game will surely get their money's worth.

Mrs. Peter Pfeifer Claimed by Death

Mrs. Peter Pfeifer nee Doss of Frankfort, Ill., passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Stauffenberg in Green Garden, Saturday August 21st at 6:40 o'clock at the age of 71 years. An illness of 4 months duration of heart trouble was the cause of death.

The deceased was born Nov. 5, 1854 in Germany. At the age of 3 years she came with her parents to this country. In 1874 she was united in marriage with Peter Pfeifer. To this union were born 9 children of whom a son and daughter passed away at an early age, and in 1915 Mr. Pfeifer passed beyond.

Surviving her are 5 sons, Frank and George of Chicago Heights, Peter of Homewood and Charles and Ernest of Frankfort; 2 daughters, Mrs. John Stauffenberg of Green Garden and Mrs. Fred Woodcock of Sperling, Canada; 1 sister, Mrs. Dora Gerloff of Riverdale and a host of relatives and friends. A brother, Fred Doss of Monee, Ill., died August 11th.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Stauffenberg to St. Peter Evangelical church in Frankfort. Burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery. Rev. S. Gerhold of Frankfort and Rev. Holgraft of Manhattan officiating.

OAK LAWN

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
E. A. Reese, Pastor.

The tile for the parsonage have arrived and now within a few short weeks the super-structure of the building will be up. The work is volunteer work, proportioned among the builders of the community. Mr. Harry Phillips supervised the concrete work, the Peterson boys are undertaking the mason work, Mr. Jacob Scanlan the floor work, Mr. Louis Widner the lathing and Mr. Lees and Priston, the finishing work. Many others are also helping and any evening or Saturday afternoon will find the busy builders on the job. Any reader of these News who is a friend of the Church, will be most welcomed as a helper if he should care to.

Congratulations are pouring in Mr. and Mrs. Reese who have announced the birth of Katherine Lee an 8 1/4 pound baby born Sunday night August 22nd. Dr. Ed. Schuster was the attending physician.

A TOUCH OF OLD SPAIN

These entertainers have been brought to the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia where 150 years of American Independence is being celebrated, by the Los Angeles County, California, Chamber of Commerce. The westerners have built a fine old Spanish mission in the Palace of Foreign, Civic, Fashion and Agriculture Display and there show the resources and advantages of their native land. The musicians and dancers entertain all visitors who enter the patio to rest a bit after "doing the exposition." The Exposition continues until December 1.

"By Their Schools Ye Shall Know Them"

BY EDITH BRADLEY WELLS

Is it any wonder that some of the parents of Palos children are risking their own peace and standing in the community in order to obtain the best possible schools for their children? For most parents value the welfare of their children far more than their own comfort. There are three possibilities open to ambitious parents of Palos children. One is to move to communities where first class schools are already established. Another is to crowdfund to tutor the children at home themselves or hire a private tutor. Some are doing this. Others are sending their children to schools away from Palos. The third possibility is to work for first class schools right here in Palos, schools where ALL the Palos children may have the best that modern life can provide. ALL the children in a great wealthy Republic like ours, SHOULD have the opportunity of studying under well trained sympathetic teachers, in modern, sanitary, schoolhouses.

Studies of statistics concerning the places where men mentioned in "Who's Who" have been raised, show that neither the farms nor the cities have been the training places of our living great men. The suburbs have produced them. And what suburbs? Suburbs like our Winnetka and Evanston, where the citizens have been intelligent enough to give of their time and money, that their children might have the "best schools." The north shore schools have become so widely and favorably known that recently the electric lines put a big advertisement in the Chicago papers, inviting Chicagoans to come to the towns of good schools. Those good schools have brought such desirable people to the north shore towns that the real estate values have soared sky high. Those who owned acreages in those towns a few years ago are rich. But real estate values are of second importance only to us parents. We want, as Abraham Lincoln wanted for his son, the "best schools."

We DO NOT wish to send our children away from home to school in order that they may obtain the best. We want the best schools right here in Palos. We received a telegram telling us of the untimely death of Junior Wilson 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wilson. The Wilsons had been visiting in Paduca, Kentucky and were on their return home, when Junior took ill with appendicitis. He died Tuesday noon at St. Louis, mother, father, and sisters being present at the bedside. He was buried in St. Louis where the family lived before moving to Oak Lawn. Arthur Wagner with Mrs. Wagner who is a sister of Mrs. Wilson, and Mr. Mullen who is Mrs. Wilson's father, left Tuesday evening to attend the funeral. The sympathy of all of Oak Lawn is extended to this bereaved family.

best. Especially do we not want to send them away while they are of grade school age. We want at least one of the "best schools" right here in our home town, where we can watch our children and help in their training. With sufficient interest and the help of our fellow townsmen we can have such a school. Let's have one!

Free Medical Advice Given at Monee Fair

Free medical examination and advice, and a thorough dental inspection is offered visitors at the Monee District fair, to be held at Monee, Ill., Sept. 22 to 24, thanks to the educational exhibits of the State of Illinois, which have been secured for the fair, thru the efforts of the Secretary of the fair.

A staff of physicians and nurses from the Department of Public Health, all well qualified for the various duties to be performed, will be at the service of the public throughout the duration of the fair.

This medical corps serves in various ways to guide the public to a more healthful manner of living. They co-operate thoroughly with the local physicians, and for their valuable advice and suggestions, there is no charge.

Upon entering the booth wherein the staff operates, visitors are given a card, upon which notations are made from the various processes of the examination. The weight and height are recorded, and the variance between the weight and the standard weight of the individual, height and age considered. And, by several approved methods, the blood pressure is determined. This process serves as a guide and index to the approach and danger of sundry ailments. If abnormal, further attention to physical conditions are considered in order, and the individual is urged to consult a reputable local physician for a more thorough examination, and treatment.

Along with these tests, the physicians deliver their opinion, along with the recognized and proven theories relative to various diseases and ailments. Much may be learned about health in general, in addition to the advantage of having the physique tested to determine any approaching infirmity. Wherever the medical examinations are given, the public always responds in great numbers, and much good is accomplished. This opportunity is offered all who visit the tent in which the educational exhibits are held.

Teeth—the source of many bodily ills, is a duty too many neglect. In the educational exhibit, competent and qualified dentists will be on duty, and will gratuitously inspect the teeth of interested visitors at the fair, advise treatment, if any be needed, and render splendid service in enabling the public to guard against the inroads of decay and infection, which in turn, bring about the development of so many ills. Unless teeth are positively known to be sound, the careful person will have an occasional examination made. In this exhibit, such an examination can be obtained without charge, and by a specialist duly qualified, and entirely unbiased in the professional advice he may see fit to offer.

Visitors at the fair are invited to pay this feature a visit, derive from

Another Company Seeking Mokena Gas Franchise

Some weeks ago the village council Mokena granted a franchise to the Public Service Co., to lay gas mains in the village, the franchise stipulating that the company was to lay the mains within 15 months. Since this franchise was granted the Western United Gas and Electric Co., of Aurora who had gas to New Lenox have also sought a similar franchise from the village. It is understood they could lay gas mains and give service sooner than the Public Service. So now the question is up before the village board as to whether they can break the Public Service franchise and give a new franchise to the Aurora Company. The village attorney has the case under advisement.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

To give variety and elegance to informal meals there is no better aid than a well-stocked fruit closet. This is the time of the year to fill the shelves with jams, jellies, preserves and conserves. The following suggestions may be worth while in regard to their use:

A cornstarch pudding topped with a spoonful of strawberry preserves or any other small fruit, makes a plain dish quite out of the ordinary.

Any pudding like rice, bread, left-over cake with plain custard is richer and more tasty with a spoonful of jelly or jam dotted over it.

Milk toast is delicious served with blueberry jelly, blackberry jam or loganberry preserve.

A firm jelly may be cut into cubes to use in fruit salads, to garnish cocktails, cake frosting, as well as ice cream.

Jelly rolls, jelly tarts, jelly doughnuts and jelly omelet are all easy to make if one has plenty of jelly.

Jams or jellies are good to serve with waffles and griddle cakes; piled in layers with plenty of butter and jelly on each layer, they may be cut as pie and are served as dessert.

Very small baking powder biscuits, opened and spread with butter, then with jam or jelly are fine; cover and serve hot as a tasty sandwich.

Apple sauce with a few spoonfuls of strawberry jam added makes an entirely different sauce.

Crush strawberries until well-mashed, then take equal measures of sugar, stir and let stand in a cool place until all the sugar has been well dissolved and absorbed by the berries. Have cans well sterilized and cool, fill and seal without cooking. Keep in a very cool cellar and they will be good to the last can. Raspberries and other small fruits may be canned fresh in the same way. This is the time to preserve watermelon pickles for the winter. Soaked over night in salted water, then cooked in clear water until tender and then dropped into a spicy vinegar and sugar and scalded, then canned, they will be a welcome dish in the winter.

Rhubarb jelly is particularly good with ham. Grape, currant, mint and lemonade are served with meats.

When serving game a spoonful of currant jelly added to the gravy makes a piquant sauce.

To avoid lumps in sauces and gravies add the fat to the flour and cook before adding the liquid, or when sugar is used mix flour and sugar well before adding it.

Sweet Butter, Ham and Mustard Sandwiches.—Cream one-half pound of butter (unsalted), add sufficient French mustard to highly season it. Spread thin slices of bread with the butter; cover one-half of the slices with thinly sliced boiled ham, put together in pairs, trim off the crusts and cut into any desired shape.

Carmi Sandwiches.—Drain sardines from a large can. Remove the skins and bones and finely mince. Add two tablespoonfuls of finely chopped sour pickles, season with salt, mustard, pepper, catsup and moisten with mayonnaise. Spread rye bread with horse-radish butter, and half the slices with the sardine mixture. Put together in pairs, cut into rounds and serve with any crisp salad.

Brown and White Sandwiches.—Spread brown bread with butter and French mustard, spread white bread with snappy rich cheese. Put together in pairs and cut with a round cutter.

CHIC STYLES FOR SCHOOL;
EARLY FALL MILLINERY

RIGHT in the midst of the long vacation mother wakes up on some placid summer morning with something weighing on her mind. It is the fact that Marguerite, Frances, Mary and the rest must soon be answering the roll call at school and thereby hangs a tale of new clothes for fast growing youngsters. Where-withal shall they be clothed for the fall season? Is there anything new in fabrics that is worth considering? If not, which of the old reliables is favored? It goes without saying that school frocks must be simple—but how shall they be varied and what ered in the list. High, snug collars and full sleeves with varied treatments of the shoulder line are liked for girls up to their middle teens.

In August fashion sounds the retreat of summer millinery from shops and departments to make way for between-seasons and fall hats. These begin to arrive in late July and soon replace their more fragile sisters, however lovely they are, with sturdier stuff. This year the advance guard of fall headwear was made up of light-colored felt and velours hats, many of them having medium wide brims and high dented crowns. They

Ready for the School Bell.

Little details of finish reveal their up-to-dateness?

Beginnings, with wool or silk, are seen to stand at the head of a dependable class which includes twills, wool crepes and various novelty weaves for dresses. In silks, crepe de chine, canton crepe and other wash silks are as practical as wool or cotton for school frocks, while the small-are soft and therefore supple and adaptable, with brims that may be turned up or down and crowns that may be dented to suit the wearer. These were soon followed by felt blocked shapes and draped hats of antelope and foudlard felts in darker colors. Hats of moire, satin, ribbon, velvet and combinations of fabrics are popular items for fall wear.

Judging from these early arrivals dailists are making distinctly different types for the matron and the maid. Older women will not wear apperish hats, but will be smartly crowned with supple, intricately raped and very chic millinery, while the flapper will wear simpler modes.

A youthful baretta leads the group of hats chosen from current showings, as pictured here. It has drooping, thin-covered brim and soft crown of cloth, and bears a rhinestone ornament at the front. A wide brimmed, flared hat, with draped and tucked crown, is finished with a ribbon ornament and a still wider hat, of the have retrospective type, bears a cluster of velvet fruit at the right side. Summer lingers in the heavier straws like ballbuntins and is represented in the modified poke shape, faced with satin and adorned with handsome feather ornaments. Finally a black and white model makes a late summer appeal, with soft, floppy brim, faced with velvet, crown covered with applique embroidery, a collar of fancy braid and a sparkling ornament at the front.

Lesson for August 29

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—
DUTIES TO MANLESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Commandments About Men.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Serve Men.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Helping Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Ideal Human Relationships.

I. The Fifth Commandment (v. 12).
1. How this commandment may be broken.

(1) By showing disrespect to parents. Disrespect is shown to parents—

(a) By speaking of them as "the old man" and "the old woman."

(b) By being ashamed to be seen in their company.

(2) By disobedience.

(3) By not supporting them in their old age.

2. Promises annexed to this commandment.

(1) "That it may be well with thee" (Eph. 6:3).

(2) That thou mayest live long upon the earth.

II. The Sixth Commandment (v. 13).

This is a bulwark thrown around human life. Man was created in God's image. Every attempt to take human life is a thrust at God. This commandment may be broken:

1. By sinful anger (Matt. 5:22).

2. By hatred (1 Jno. 3:15).

3. By immoderate recreation.

4. By employers having unsafe surroundings, thereby causing the death of their employees.

5. By sending children to toil in shops and factories before maturity.

6. By suicide.

7. By infanticide.

8. By wars.

III. The Seventh Commandment (v. 14).

This is a bulwark thrown around the home. This commandment may be broken:

1. By unclean thoughts, affections, purposes and imaginations (Matt. 5:27, 28; 15:19).

2. By unchaste conversation.

3. By wanton looks (Isa. 3:16; II Peter 2:14).

4. By immodest apparel.

5. By actual adultery.

6. By divorce.

IV. The Eighth Commandment (v. 15).

This commandment strikes at the sin of theft. This commandment may be broken:

1. By taking that which actually belongs to another.

2. By false weights and measures.

3. By extortion.

4. By employers defrauding employees and the employee failing to do honest work or put in full time.

5. By borrowing and not returning.

6. By going into debt, knowing that payment is impossible.

7. By usury.

8. By graft.

9. By lying advertisements.

10. By making assignments to escape payment of debts.

11. By strong nations oppressing the weaker ones.

V. The Ninth Commandment (v. 16).

The sin aimed at by this command is a most deadly one—that of lying. This commandment may be broken:

1. By actual open lying.

2. By perjury—swearing to falsehoods by the name of God.

3. By slander.

4. By tale-bearing (Lev. 19:16).

This is commonly done by repeating a report without investigating its truthfulness.

5. By creating a false impression (Ex. 23:1).

6. By a breach of promise.

7. By withholding the truth.

8. By exaggeration.

9. By flattery.

10. By recommending a man for a position of honor and trust who is unfitted for it.

VI. The Tenth Commandment (v. 17).

This commandment strikes at the desire for that which is unlawful for one to have. The sin does not lie in the desire to possess things, but in the desire to possess that which belongs to another. It is not wrong to have lands and personal property which one may have acquired honestly, but it is wrong to have the lands which belong to another. It is right for a man to have a wife, but it is sinful to have another's wife. This commandment goes back of all the rest. It deals not only with the open violation, but with the inner desires and motives. It strikes at the very purposes of the heart.

Nowhere Else to Go

WORTH

The long looked for Harlem Avenue development is now in progress. Those who have been a bit pessimistic about the future development of Worth are now witnessing some active developments. The Harlem Avenue hard road which is to be one of the lateral roads about Chicago will soon be a reality. This will have direct influence upon the real estate development in the community.

There has been much improvement in the village. The spirit of progress seems to be catching. Brother Little, one of the outstanding village boosters has made a real contribution to the beauty of the community by painting and decorating his coal and supply building. This gives the visitors who come in by train an introduction to a live wire community.

The "improvement bug" is surely spreading by the number of houses that are being painted. Mr. Ferrin, Mr. Wilson, Mr. A. Crandall and Mr. Altman have done their part in having their homes painted. Mr. Woods is also planning doing the same as soon as the bees that inhabit the front part of the house vacate.

It is hoped that these homes will be an inspiration to others in the community. Let us remember a coat of paint and well kept lawn adds much to the beauty of our village. Let's all get behind the movement and make the village of Worth one to be proud of.

As Mr. Arvid Lysen was motor-ing to his work on Monday morning accompanied by Mrs. Lysen and their daughter Ethel, he was crowded off the street at Mt. Greenwood by a Ford touring car. His car was pushed into the ditch and overturned and Mrs. Lysen was seriously injured. The others escaped with slight injuries.

The annual Sunday School Picnic of the Worth Community Church was held, Saturday, August 7th. A lovely spot was chosen for the picnic in the Palos Forest Preserve. A large crowd was in attendance and every one had a lovely time in spite of the late arrival of the ice cream. This, however, did not prevent the ladies of the community from organizing a team and playing a good game of baseball. The regular team had better watch their step or they will be defeated when they are challenged by this new baseball nine.

LOCALS

The new homes of the Teasons on the south side are nearing completion. These homes will be a valuable addition to the residence section of Worth. The Rolfe brothers also have lots on the south side and Erwin has already had a neat garage built. This is to be used temporarily as a residence, which seems to be quite the thing these days.

Fred Luedtke is also putting up a nice little bungalow and a building has already been erected on the lot adjoining Luedtke's.

Dan Cyndall, our efficient village cop, has purchased a new motorcycle.

George Lucas has been presented with a police dog by one of his artist friends.

Everett Tesnow is working at Palos Park.

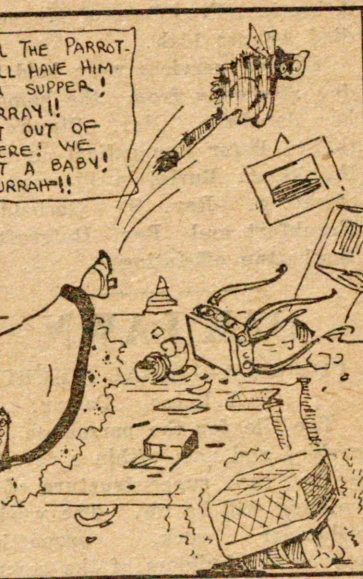

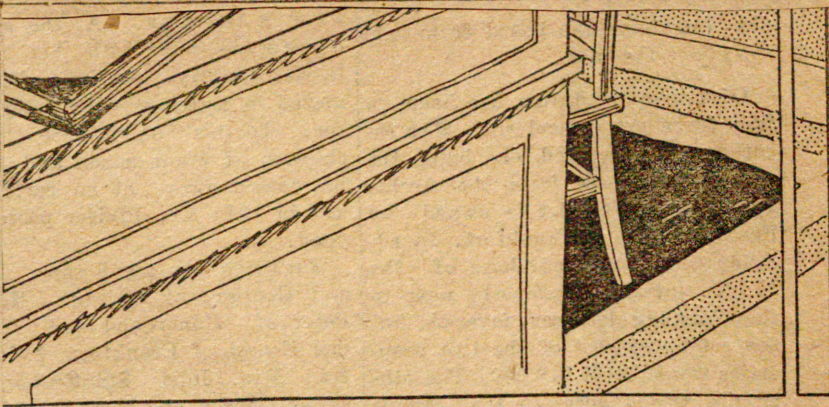

Elmer Poorman is cutting Bill Little's hay.

Elsie Preller very kindly donated her services for the Daily Vacation Bible School. She is now studying at the Chicago Kindergarten college.

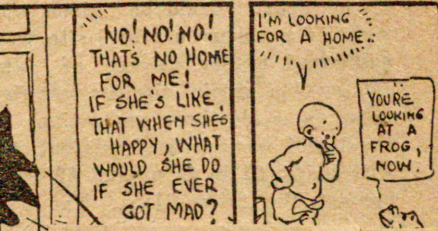

Earl Teason is recuperating from a broken arm which he received in an automobile accident.

Harold Ferrin is doing a rushing business due to numerous wrecks.

The Women's Federation Picnic was a decided success. There was a great crowd of people out and all had a good time. Mrs. Elmer Little and Mrs. Stromberg won the prize as hill climbers, climbing the mountain back of the Dunlap stand in the forest preserve. Mrs. Maccaully demonstrated her powers as a runner. She is to be Worth's next candidate for the Marathon. Mrs. Little tried to capture the pastor but luck was with him. Mrs. Kaufman was hit in the back of the head with a bean bag in the first battle with Mrs. Elliott. Mr. Ott Stromberg furnished entertainment for all the children by riding them around on his shoulders and using his ears as handle bars. Mrs. Jelley received the prize for eating the most pie. On the whole a good time was had by all. Everybody returned home tired, stuffed and happy.

ORLAND

NEWS OF CHRIST LUTHERAN CHURCH

The picnic last Sunday was well attended, altho the weather was threatening, nevertheless about 600 people enjoyed themselves at the various games and other amusements that were offered. The little tots were also given a chance to win some handsome prizes at their little games of pastime. The Ladies of the church had prepared a delicious dinner for which the low price of 50 cents was charged. About 300 people were served and all expressed their supreme satisfaction. After the picnic was over, the bills being all paid, it was found that $450 was cleared. The food and coffee was kept heated by a two burner "Protane" plate, which had been demonstrated to show a new and ideal way of using nautral gas liquified.

On Sunday, August 22nd the Lutheran church saw another class of three adults confirmed. On that day Miss Johanna Greves, Miss Helen Greves and Miss Esther Greves, three sisters of Worth, pledged faithfulness unto their Lord.

Visiting at the Lutheran parsonage this week is the Pastor's sister Miss Emma Greve of Milwaukee.

At present there is no one sick of the members of the congregation, all the ailing ones having fully recovered.

August 29th German services will be held at the Lutheran church.

On Sept. 5th the annual Mission Services will be held. There will be no services in the morning, but at 2:30 p. m., German services will be held. The Rev. Sauer of Herscher, Illinois will preach. At 7:30 p. m. English services will be conducted, in which the Rev. H. Harthun will present the needs of our synod in carrying on the soul saving work of preaching the Gospel of the Cross. All are invited to these services.

September 2nd the Ladies Aid is to meet at the Lutheran School which has been artistically decorated by Philip E. Steffen in preparation for the new school term which begins Sept. 7th at 9 a. m., Daylight Saving Time.

Mr. George Brier surprised his wife by having a modern Protane range installed. Mrs. Brier expressed her delight in no uncertain terms.

The Stork, that peculiar bird has called at the home of Irvin Bettenhausen and left a little 5 1/2 pounds parcel.

Upon opening the same the delighted parents found a little baby girl. Dr. Schussler acted as the agent for the Stork.

Mrs. L. Nicolai and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Herman Nicolai, have returned from their trip to Hull, Iowa.

Mr. Ike Cleveland who had the misfortune of smashing his fingers a week ago has returned to the Burnside hospital, as gangrene has set in. We hope that it will not be necessary to amputate the digits.

The ball game at Orland Sunday was not up to the usual brand of ball that Orland is used to seeing. Seyferth retired at the end of the fifth inning complaining of a sore arm. Ray Ludwig then stepped in, but being out of practice and not having the support of the team, Orland lost 6-2. Some very glaring errors were made by Orland. Total ed up: It was a rotten game. Better game is promised next Sunday.

Mr. Nichols, owner of the subdivision on 143rd street has erected a very fine little real estate office.

In a few weeks the "Friendly Visitor" will appear. This is a church paper published by the Pastor of Christ Lutheran church. Subscriptions can be sent to the parsonage of Christ church, so that this paper can be mailed to the subscriber every month. Price 35 cents per year.

Mr. Cleveland has returned home from the Burnside hospital. His fingers are greatly improved.

Mr. Ted, Graski, the cement contractor, had a bad accident with his truck Sunday night one mile west of Romeo. The truck was floated in, being badly damaged. Adolph Zerbs, local garage man towed the wrecked truck in.

ORLAND M. E. CHURCH

The meeting of the Women's Guild has been postponed from Thursday August 26th to Wednesday, September 1st. It will be held in the church basement. Mrs. Harvey Cooper and Mrs. Oscar Strand will be the hostesses.

Sunday August 29th Bible school at 9:30. Despite the very hot weather the Bible School attendance has been unusually good. The Adult Bible Class had 32 in attendance for the last two Sundays. However, there is room for more—if you are missing out—you better come next Sunday to our "live wire" discussions.

Morning worship at 10:30 start-ard time. The sermon is the next in the series on "World's Greatest Short Stories." Evening service at 7:30 will be a union one in charge of the young people.

Mrs. Tom Richards and daughter of Campus, Illinois were Friday and Saturday guests at the Methodist parsonage.

Professor and Mrs. Arthur Delmarter of Kalamazoo State Normal School were week end guests at the Methodist parsonage. They have been on an extensive motor trip and were on their way back to Kalamazoo. Professor Delmarter and Mr. Satterlund were fellow students in the Graduate School at Northwestern University a couple of years ago.

Last Sunday morning a group of folks representing the churches of Worth, Palos Park and Orland met on "Inspiration Hill" back of Dunlap's stand in Palos Park at 6 a. m., standard time. A delightful breakfast was enjoyed after which all went to the top of the hill where a sunrise prayer meeting was held. All present expressed their desire for a repetition of this experiment. The Rev. Mr. Sanders of the Worth Community Church had general charge of the meeting.

The evening union service representing Worth, Palos Park and Orland was well attended. It was held in the Worth Community church. The preacher of the evening was the Rev. Mr. Malmquist of one of the Swedish M. E. churches of Chicago.

MOKENA

Thieves broke into the local Rock Island depot recently and stole $10 worth of merchandise. The thieves had cut off the lock on the freight house door but when they could not get the door open due to an inside lock they broke out a window pane in the telegraph office and got in the freight room. The same time this burglary was committed the depot at New Lenox was broken into and a suit case stolen. The M. C. depot at Frankfort was burglarized the same night.

Word has been received that W. R. Lynk and family who left last Saturday for their vacation, arrived that night at Eagle River, Wis. They expect to be gone for several weeks.

The M. E. Sunday school picnic was held in the village park Friday afternoon and was quite well attended. All had a good time.

Miss Nora Green and Mrs. A. Kohl are managing the Mokena postoffice in the absence of Mrs. Daisy Lynk, postmistress.

Clifford Knudson and Leon Tonn left early Sunday morning on their vacation trip to Wisconsin, arriving in Madison, Wis., in the afternoon. They will visit the Dells, Winona, Squaw Lake and other places.

George Rinke and family who resided in the Fred Mau place, have moved into the Pfaff bungalow.

The Mokena Larkin Club was entertained Tuesday evening in Joliet at the home of Mrs. Hugh Deadmore. Bunco was played.

Hyacinth, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Rinke who has been very ill is no better.

The former Moke Camp Fire Girls will hold a re-union Saturday of this week. They will take in a show at the Rialto in Joliet and will enjoy a banquet at the Snapp cafeteria.

Mrs. Forman has been visiting with friends in Plainfield the past two weeks.

Misses Anna and Phyllis Barenz are spending their vacation at home.

Mrs. Walter Fisher left the latter part of the week on a vacation.

Mrs. Krall and two daughters of Herscher, Ill., were guests at the home of the formers daughter, Mrs. Forman.

Mrs. Lizzie Moriarty who has been in the Silver Cross hospital Joliet since she fell and broke her leg several weeks ago, was brought to the home of her daughter-in-law Mrs. Rose Moriarty last Friday and is convalescing nicely.

The Mokena Men's Club will hold their Labor day dance on Saturday night, September 4th as they have rented their pavilion to the St. Mary's parish for Labor day.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Mau are now located in their new home in Buffalo, N. Y., where they will reside for the next several months.

Dog poisoners are busy. A valuable German police dog belonging to Edwin Hirsch fell the victim of the poisoner Monday night.

The St. John Evangelical church is preparing for a very active program for the fall and winter season, according to announcements made by Rev. W. J. Cramer.

Threshing is well under way in this section and the oat crop gives promise of being a good one.

A number of Mokena folks are planning on attending the Central States Fair at Aurora.

On the floor of the cabin Nepee dropped on her knees and finished unwrapping the blanket. She was not afraid of Baree. She had forgotten McTaggart. And then, as Baree rolled in a limp heap on the floor, she saw his half-closed eyes and the dry blood on his jaws, and the light left her face as swiftly as the sun is shadowed by a cloud.

"Baree," she cried softly. "Baree—Baree!"

The voice of the Willow thrilled Baree. It seemed to stir the sluggish blood in his veins, and he opened his eyes wider and saw again the wonderful stars that had glowed at him so softly the day of Wakayooo's death. One of the Willow's long braids fell over her shoulder, and he smelled again the sweet scent of her hair as her hand caressed him and her voice talked to him. Then she got up suddenly and left him, and he did not move while he waited for her. In a moment she was back with a basin of water and a cloth. Gently she washed the blood from his eyes and mouth. And still Baree made no move. He scarcely breathed. But Nepee saw the little quivers that shot through his body when her hand touched him. Like electric shocks.

"He beat you with a club," she was saying, her dark eyes within a foot of Baree's. "He beat you! That man-beast!"

There came an interruption. The door opened, and the man-beast stood looking down on them, a grin on his red face. Instantly Baree showed that he was alive. He sprang back from under the Willow's hand with a sudden snarl and faced McTaggart. The hair of his spine stood up like a brush; his fangs gleamed menacingly.

"There is a devil in him," said McTaggart. "He is wild-born or he will take off a hand, ka sakahet!" It was the first time he had called her that lover's name in Cree—sweetheart! Her heart pounded. She bent her head for a moment over her clenched hands, and McTaggart—looking down on what he thought was her confusion—laid his hand caressingly on her hair. From the door Pierrot had heard the word, and now he saw the caress, and he raised a hand as if to shut out the sight of a sacrifice.

"Mon Dieu!" he breathed.

In the next instant he had given a sharp cry of wonder that mingled with a sudden yell of pain from McTaggart. Like a flash Baree had darted across the floor and fastened his teeth in the Factor's leg. They had bitten deep before McTaggart freed himself with a powerful kick. With an oath he snatched his revolver from its holster. The Willow was ahead of him. With a little cry she darted to Baree and caught him in her arms. As she looked up at McTaggart, her soft, bare throat was within a few inches of Baree's naked fangs. Her eyes blazed.

"You beat him!" she cried. "He hates you—hates you—"

"Let him go!" called Pierrot in an agony of fear. "Mon Dieu! I say let him go or he will tear the life from you!"

"He hates you—hates you—hates you—" the Willow was repeating over and over again into McTaggart's startled face. Then suddenly she turned to her father. "No, he will not tear the life from me," she cried. "See! It is Baree! Did I not tell you that? It is Baree! Is it not proof that he defended me?"

"From me!" gasped McTaggart, his face darkening.

Pierrot advanced and laid a hand on McTaggart's arm. He was smiling. "Let us leave them to fight it out between themselves, m'sieu," he said. "They are two little firebrands, and we are not safe. If she is bitten—"

He shrugged his shoulders. A great load had been lifted from them suddenly. His voice was soft and persuasive. And now the anger had gone out of the Willow's face. A coquettish uplift of her eyes caught McTaggart, and she looked straight at him, half smiling, as she spoke to her father:

"I will join you soon, mon pere—you and M'sieu the Factor from Lac Bain!"

There were undeniable little devils in her eyes, McTaggart thought—little devils laughing full at him as she spoke, setting his brain afire and his blood to running wildly. Those eyes—full of dancing witches! How he would tame them and play with them—very soon now. He followed Pierrot outside. In his exultation he no longer felt the smart of Baree's teeth.

"I will show you my new carole that I have made for winter, m'sieu," said Pierrot as the door closed behind them.

Half an hour later Nepee came out of the cabin. McTaggart's jaws were set, but his eyes flared up with pleasure when he saw her. She knew what it was about. The Factor from Lac Bain had been demanding his answer of Pierrot, and Pierrot had been telling him what she had insisted upon—that he must come to her. And he was coming! She turned with a quick beating of the heart and hurried down a little path. She heard McTaggart's footsteps behind her, and threw the flash of a smile over her shoulder. But her teeth were set tight. The nails of her fingers were cutting into the palms of her hands.

Pierrot stood without moving. He watched them as they disappeared into the edge of the forest. Nepee still ahead of McTaggart. Out of his breast rose a sharp breath.

"Par les mille cornes du diable!" he swore softly. "Is it possible—that she smiles from her heart at that beast? Non! It is impossible. And yet—if it is so—"

One of his brown hands tightened convulsively about the handle of the knife in his belt, and slowly he began to follow them.

McTaggart did not hurry to overtake Nepee. She was following the narrow path deeper into the forest, and he was glad of that. They would be alone—away from Pierrot. He was satisfied to let her go on. When she turned from the narrow trail into a side path that scarcely bore the mark of travel, his heart gave an exultant jump. If she kept on, he would very soon have her alone—a good distance from the cabin. The blood ran hot in his face. He did not speak to her, through fear that she would stop. Ahead of them he heard the rumble of water. It was the creek running through the chasm.

Nepee was making straight for that sound. With a little laugh she started to run, and when she stood at the edge of the chasm, McTaggart was fully fifty yards behind her. Twenty feet sheer down there was a deep pool between the rock walls, a pool so deep that it was like blue ink. She turned to face the Factor from Lac Bain. He had never looked more like a red beast to her. Until this moment she had been afraid. But now—in an instant—she terrified her. Before she could speak what she had planned to say, he was at her side, and had taken her face between his two great hands, his coarse fingers twining in the silken strands of her thick braids where they fell over her shoulders at the neck.

"Ka sakahet!" he cried passionately. "Pierrot said you would have an answer for me. But I need no answer now. You are mine! Mine!"

She gave a cry. It was a gasping, broken cry. His arms were about her like bands of iron, crushing her slender body, shutting off her breath, turning the world almost black for her. She could neither struggle nor cry out. She felt the hot passion of his lips on her face, heard his voice—and then came a moment's freedom, and air into her strangled lungs. Pierrot was calling! He had come to the fork in the trail, and he was calling the Willow's name!

McTaggart's hot hand came over her mouth.

"Don't answer," she heard him say. Strength—anger—hatred flared up in her, and fiercely she struck the hand down. Something in her wonderful eyes held McTaggart. They blazed into his very soul.

"Bete noir!" she panted at him, freeing herself from the last touch of his hands. "Beast—black beast!" Her voice trembled, and her face flamed. "See—I came to show you my pool—and tell you what you wanted to hear—and you—you—have crushed me like a beast—like a great rock— See! down there—it is my pool!"

She had not planned it like this. She had intended to be smiling, even laughing, in this moment. But McTaggart had spoiled them—her carefully made plans! And yet, as she pointed, the Factor from Lac Bain looked for an instant over the edge of the chasm. And then she laughed as she gave him a sudden shove from behind.

"And that is my answer, M'sieu le Facteur from Lac Bain!" she cried tauntingly as he plunged headlong into the deep pool between the rock walls.

From the edge of the open Pierrot saw what had happened, and he gave a great gasp. He drew back among the balsams. This was not a moment for him to show himself. While his heart drummed like a hammer, his face was filled with joy.

On her hands and knees the Willow was peering over the edge. Bush McTaggart had disappeared. He had gone down like the great clod he was; the water of her pool had closed over him with a dull splash that was like a chuckle of triumph. He appeared now, beating out with his arms and legs to keep himself afloat, while the Willow's voice came to him in fainting cries.

"Bete noir! Bete noir! Beast! Beast!"

She flung small sticks and tufts of earth down at him fiercely; and McTaggart, looking up as he gained his equilibrium, saw her leaning so far over that she seemed about to fall. Her long braids hung down into the chasm, gleaming in the sun; her eyes were laughing while her lips taunted him; he could see the flash of her white teeth.

"Beast! Beast!"

He began swimming, still looking up at her. It was a hundred yards down the slow-going current to the beach of shale where he could climb out, and a half of that distance she followed him, laughing and taunting him, and flinging down sticks and pebbles. He noted that none of the sticks or stones was large enough to hurt him. When at last his feet touched bottom, she was gone.

Swiftly Nepee ran back over the trail, and almost into Pierrot's arms. She was panting and laughing when for a moment she stopped.

"I have given him the answer, Noot-awe! He is in the pool!"

Into the balsams she disappeared like a bird. Pierrot made no effort to stop her or to follow.

"Tonnerre de Dieu!" he chuckled—and cut straight across for the other trail.

Nepee was out of breath when she reached the cabin. Baree, fastened to a table-leg by a babiche thong, heard her pause for a moment at the door. Then she entered and came straight to him. During the half-hour of her absence Baree had scarcely moved. That half-hour, and the few minutes that had preceded it, had made tremendous impressions upon him. Nature, heredity, and instinct were at work, clashing and readjusting, impinging on him a new intelligence—the beginning of a new understanding. A swift and savage impulse had made him leap at Bush McTaggart when the Factor put his hand on the Willow's head. It was not reason. It was the dog—and woman.

And here again it was the woman. She had called to the great hidden passion that was in Baree and that had come to him from Kazan. Of all the living things in the world, he knew that he must not hurt this creature that appeared to him through the door. He trembled as she knelt before him again, and up through the years came the wild and glorious surge of Kazan's blood, overwhelming the birth, submerging the savagery of his wild—and with his head flat on the floor he whined softly, and wagged his tail.

Nepee gave a cry of joy.

Small Insects Not Named by Scientists

Some tiny insects are never seen except in winter and so little known that they have no popular name. Scientists call them Borcus, and they leap on the snow like miniature black grasshoppers. What they eat and how they live has not yet been discovered.

The crane flies, better known, perhaps, as "daddy longlegs," with their narrow wings and dangling, awkward legs, are strictly summer insects. But they have a small and poor relation without any wings at all and only moderately long legs, which enjoys itself in the very coldest kind of winter weather and goes a-wooing across the snow with the thermometer below zero.

By far the largest number of snow insects belong to an insect division familiarly known as "springtails." Some 900 different kinds of springtails have been recorded. They are found all over the globe from the Arctic to the Antarctic.—Nature Magazine.

Wonders of World

The seven wonders of the ancient world were the pyramids of Egypt, the hanging gardens of Babylon, the temple of Diana at Ephesus, the statue of Jupiter in Greece, the tomb of Mausolus at Halicarnassus, the pharos at Alexander and the colossus of Rhodes.

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

ANTHRACNOSE IS SERIOUS DISEASE

The agricultural experiment station of the North Carolina State college has just issued Bulletin No. 248, "Anthracnose of Dewberries and Its Control," which gives the results of several years of investigation with this disease, which has seriously affected dewberry growing in North Carolina. The bulletin is published as the result of work done by Prof. F. A. Wolf, formerly of the experiment station staff, and B. O. Dodge of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The authors state that anthracnose is the most serious disease affecting the dewberry crop and is due to a fungus which spreads more easily and rapidly in rainy weather. The anthracnose girdles the canes, causing them to die, and causes the berries to become scabby or brown, dry and woody. After several seasons of continuous work in fighting the disease, Doctor Wolf found that the best way to control it was to remove thoroughly and destroy all growth immediately after harvest, and to spray the new growth.

"There are three critical times when the applications should be made," says the bulletin. "The first is during August when the new growth is about one foot high; the second, as soon as possible after the canes have been tied up in the spring, and the third as soon as the petals have fallen. Bordeaux mixture 4-4-50 is recommended as probably the best spray material to use."

It is pointed out also that new plantings should not be infected by using old cane stubs which have been attacked by the disease.

The bulletin gives the latest fertilizer recommendations for growing dewberries, and outlines successful methods used by some of the leading growers of the section in combating diseases and in raising good crops.

In Hunting for Rabbits

Use of Ferrets Barred

Many of our orchard men are greatly troubled by rabbits. These animals gnaw trees, eat shrubs and make nuisances of themselves generally. Under the law farmers may kill such rabbits if they can catch them in the act of destroying property but that is not satisfactory. With a good ferret they could clean out their premises and save much trouble and expense, writes John T. McCormick in the Rural New Yorker. But the conservation law will not permit the use of ferrets—and farmers want to know why? We therefore asked the secretary of the conservation commission to explain. Here is what he says:

"As you know, rabbits are one of the species of game protected by law, and can only be legally taken during the open season for the same with a gun fired at arm's length without rest between sunrise and sunset, except that the owner or occupant of farm lands may take rabbits at any time of the year and in any manner, except by the use of ferrets, where they are doing damage to property."

"The habits of the rabbit when not foraging for food are to live in burrows, and when hunted they will immediately take to the burrows for protection and, therefore, can be very easily captured, in the event that the use of a ferret is permitted. The ferret is placed in the burrow and either kills the rabbits that it finds in there or drives them out, and they are then readily captured by the hunter, either in a bag or in their hands or taken by means of shooting. This is the reason why the law was passed prohibiting the use of ferrets in hunting rabbits."

Proper Summer Pruning to Establish Fruiting

At certain stages in the care of an orchard, fruiting can be better established or maintained by the proper use of summer pruning. For instance, if the tree has a densely shaded top, early season thinning out of the upper part of the top tends to hasten instead of delay fruiting. Also, pinching of strongly growing shoots sometimes induces blossom bud formation if increased growth in diameter is made after the tipping is done. The trouble with this operation is that there is no certainty of how much growth will be made after tipping. It has already been noted that giving a dormant season type of cutting in the summer time after nearly all the growth of the season is completed, fails to give the growth type which is associated with blossoming. If the need of the tree seems clear, and the type of response can be somewhat clearly forecasted, try such summer pruning as fits the case. If it is to be used merely as an experiment, leave it alone, or at least be prepared to be satisfied with an experimenter's results.

Keep Abreast of Times

Since the fund of horticultural information is constantly changing, it behooves the wide-awake, successful apple producer to keep abreast of the times by reading the latest publications of his agricultural experiment station. He should also subscribe for several good farm papers and magazines. It is also important that he attend fruit growers' meetings and demonstrations, in order that he may obtain new ideas and suggestions from others.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

BACKACHE

PAIN in the back is popularly considered a symptom of kidney disease. How this belief arose is difficult to say. Patent medicine advertisements have, of course, strengthened the idea in the public mind. But there must have been a pre-existing belief or the kidney pill and plaster promoters never would have taken it up.

The fact is that there is no connection at all between Bright's disease and pain in the back. Most persons with chronic kidney disease complain far more of indigestion and discomfort in the stomach than they do of backache. Of course, a person with Bright's disease may also have a pain in his back, but there is no connection between the two conditions.

Most cases of persistent and longstanding pain in the back are due to some kind of muscle or ligament tear or strain or to a dislocation, either complete or partial, of some of the joints in the bones of the pelvis. These accidents, for they are just as much accidents as a broken arm or a dislocated knee, usually occur during heavy lifting or straining. An unusually severe exertion or a sudden strain tears some of the muscle fibers or the ligaments in the back muscles. Little attention may be paid to it at the time but, in the course of a few days, the pain and tenderness increase, until any movement and especially any muscular effort becomes extremely painful.

Few persons understand that a strain is really a fracture of the muscle or ligament. Just as a fracture is a breaking of the bone. Torn muscles ordinarily heal slower than broken bones. If a man breaks a leg, he is willing to go to bed, have a cast or a splint put on his leg and stay there until the doctor says he can get up. But if he tears a muscle he generally says, "It's nothing but a sprain," never goes near a doctor, keeps on working and so never gives the torn muscle a chance to heal.

And it doesn't heal and he has a permanently disabled muscle that is weak and that causes pain whenever it is used.

A joint dislocation is due to the same cause; too heavy lifting. Only here the muscle doesn't tear but the joint slips out of position.

Sprain, either of the muscles or the joints, should have plenty of time for recovery. The back should be strapped and held in position until well.

DISEASES OF THE MOUTH

IN A recent article in the New York Medical Journal, Dr. Joseph C. Bloodgood, the well-known surgeon of Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, talks about the mouth as a source of disease. The mouth, he says, has three interesting relations, one to food, one as a source of infection, and one as a starting point for cancer. As it is easy to examine the mouth, the possibilities of detecting any disease conditions early are good. So, much trouble can be prevented by frequent, careful examination of the mouth and teeth.

Diseases of the mouth may affect the mucous membrane lining the lips and mouth, the teeth, not only the part we can see but the larger and more important part which is buried in the bony sockets and the gums. In the mouth are the tonsils, often the center of an infection which may poison the whole body and cause such diseases as rheumatism, inflammation of any of the joints, diseases of the heart, arteries or kidneys.

The mucous membrane covering the lips and tongue and lining the mouth cavity is, on account of its delicate nature, especially subject to irritation. Constant and long continued irritation is probably one of the exciting causes of cancer.

The lips are subject to several kinds of irritation. Cigarette burns often cause sore spots. Smokers of pipes, especially short clay pipes, may have burns on the lips, if the pipe is always held on the same spot. These tender spots may later lead to cracks in the lips which may be the starting point of cancer.

The tongue, in smokers who have sharp or broken teeth, may develop chronic sore spots on which cancer is apt to develop. A long sharp point on a tooth may cause a chronic irritation of the inside of the cheek, on which cancer may develop. The danger is greatly increased if the teeth are dirty and uncared for.

These are all causes which can easily be avoided or removed, if chronic sores have once developed. While there is no positive proof that tobacco will cause cancer, the habitual smoker or chewer of tobacco is more apt to develop chronic points of irritation on the lips, tongue or cheek than the nonsmoker. To avoid this danger, every person who uses tobacco should take special pains to avoid burning the lips or tongue, to have the teeth kept in good order, to have decayed teeth filled or removed and to have any sharp or irritating points removed or smoothed down.

HUSBAND DID THE WASHING

His Wife Confined to Her Bed by Ill Health

Because of his wife's frequent ill health, Mr. J. F. Gage was obliged to do the washing and cooking for the family.

One day when Mrs. Gage was confined to her bed, he brought her the newspaper to read. Among the advertisements she noticed a letter from another sick woman telling of the help she had received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I'll try it," she decided. Her husband brought home a bottle and only a few days after she had begun to take it she felt well enough to be up around the house. Gradually her general health improved until she is now able to do her own work.

In a letter which Mrs. Gage recently wrote, she said, "I have taken twelve bottles and feel like a new woman." She has told many women about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one of her friends is now taking it. Her address is Mrs. J. F. Gage, Route 5, Brownwood, Texas.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been taken by women for more than half a century with very satisfactory results.

Regan Is Playing Great Ball

Any fan who has had the pleasure of watching Second Baseman Regan of the Boston Red Sox in action on the field will understand why he is so well liked in Beantown. He is playing better ball with each game.

BASEBALL NOTES

It costs the major leagues about $200,000 a year to maintain its staff of umpires.

Pitchers of the New York Yankees now wear catchers' shin guards in batting practice.

All a golfer like Bobby Jones has to know in the way of arithmetic is the numbers up to 72.

On September 9, 1922, William (Baby Doll) Jacobson of the St. Louis Browns made three three-base hits.

Dave Barbee, home run king of the Piedmont league, and third baseman for Greensboro, has joined the Athletics.

Manager Robinson of Brooklyn is still buying players. With his pitching staff in good shape, he is now looking for out and infielders.

The baseball fans of Boston are said by experts to have a better understanding of the fine points of the national game than those in any other city.

It begins to look as if the Boston Braves, picked by many experts in the spring to land in the first division, will be fortunate to finish out of last place.

The only left-handed catcher to achieve prominence in the major leagues was Clements, who played with Philadelphia for a number of years.

"Chief" Bender, former pitching ace for Connie Mack and now with the Chicago White Sox, has an uncanny ability in detecting the signals of rival teams.

Hank Severide, veteran catcher of the Browns and Senators, has again changed uniforms. He was purchased by the Yankees, who were in need of backstops.

Walter Kimmick, utility infielder, was given his unconditional release by the Phillies. Kimmick was obtained from the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast league in 1924.

A movement is under way to have the rules committee of the major leagues shorten the present pitching distance to 55 feet 6 inches, a reduction of five feet.

The first new player obtained by the Pittsburgh National league baseball club for the 1927 season is Ike Danning, catcher of Idaho Falls, in the Idaho-Utah league.

Alexander Heinemann, owner of the New Orleans Pelicans, has a hat that he wears whenever it looks like rain and he doesn't want it to, such as on Sundays. It hasn't failed him in 14 years.

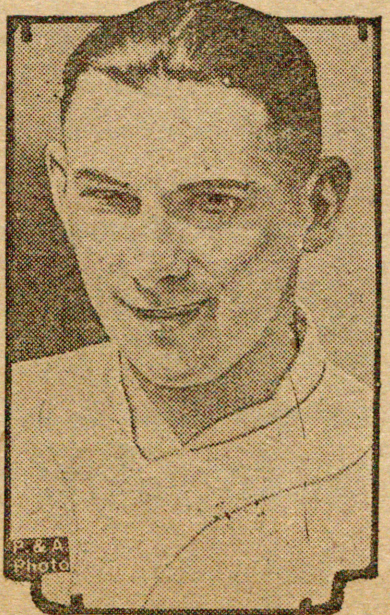

Paducah of the Kitty league established a world's record for consecutive games lost by losing 27 successive games. The former record was held by Louisville, they losing 26 games in 1889.

Pitcher Joe Reddy was given his release by Buffalo. For several years Reddy was reputed the best curve ball pitcher in the International, but has suffered from arm trouble the past two seasons.

Mobile has signed Stanley Skupski, a left-handed pitcher of Omaha, Neb., who was with Newark of the International league, at one time. He has been playing independent ball in Wisconsin more recently.

Rube Zellars, former Carnegie Steel pitcher, has been sold to Springfield of the Eastern league by Jersey City Internationals. Since Zellars left Sharon section he has been playing in the International circuit.

New $125,000 Star

Fred Shulte, outfielder and leading hitter of the Milwaukee American association baseball club, has been obtained by the St. Louis Browns. Shulte, who has been batting over .400 and who has been valued at $125,000, will report next spring. He is the most expensive player ever bought by a St. Louis club. Charles Robertson and Claude Jenard, pitchers, and Robert Lamotte, infielder, go to Milwaukee in the deal.

Sporting Squibs

There are 200 golf clubs in the vicinity of New York city.

Croquet probably is the only truly amateur sport in the world.

The old-fashioned stone's throw is just a good up-to-date maslie shot.

The Santa Barbara and Del Monte polo fields in California are said to be the finest in the world.

A championship tournament is planned in Michigan in which only left-hand golfers will compete.

Manager Jeff Dickson, the American promoter, conducts most of the boxing entertainments given in Paris.

Helen Wills is indeed a very unusual young lady. We understand she even refuses to talk about her operation.

Every little boy born in America has the right to grow up and some day become golfing champion of Great Britain.

Next to an anvil in a garage, the most worthless thing in the world is a prize fighter's advance opinion on a prize fight.

Rowing at Washington and Lee university dates from 1874 and is the oldest organized athletic sport at that institution.

Johnnie Brown, the European bantamweight champion, now fighting in America, won the British amateur title when scarcely fourteen years of age.

Edward L. Casey, former Harvard football star, may coach the Crimson freshmen squad in the fall. Casey has been head coach at Tufts four years.

Golf will never become an outstanding collegiate sport, in the opinion of Paul Hinkle, athletic coach at Butler college, because it does not teach them spirit.

Jack Dempsey's new manager, Eugene Normile, is a calm, easy-going individual, forming a sharp contrast to the champion's energetic and restless temperament.

A new form of scoring in golf has been introduced in England, the greens being marked with white circles surrounding the holes. Points instead of strokes decide the winner.

ROBINSON MAKES STAR OF HERMAN

Careful Handling Changes Temperamental One.

If anyone at this late date needs proof of Uncle Wilbert Robinson's rare ability to handle men and study their characters to the advantage of his team, they can have it in this year's Brooklyn team, says Murray Tynan in the New York Herald-Tribune. From this outfit, which, at the very best, is made up of cast-offs, venerable gentlemen commonly supposed to have seen their best years and younger ones that other managers found impossible to handle, Uncle Robbie had made a pennant contender. And he has done this chiefly through his uncanny ability to get the most out of his men.

The shining example is Babe Herman. There are others, of course, such as Vance, who was kicked from pillar to post before Robbie made him the great pitcher he is, but their cases are now baseball history. Herman presents a new testimonial to Robbie's rare judgment.

The Robin chieftain is the eighth-year manager Herman has played for in his checkered baseball career, and none of them could do anything with him. Under Robbie, however, he is the sensation of the league, a star who has jumped into overnight fame to become one of the leading hitters in the game at present. He may be a streak player or a flash in the pan—time alone will tell that—but if he is that will be no fault of Robinson's.

No one ever denied Herman's ability to hit. He played in every league of consequence before he came to Brooklyn, and he knocked the ball all over the orchard in every one of them. It was his temperament that hindered him and prevented him from becoming the star he is now. He was up with Ty Cobb in 1921 with Detroit, but Ty couldn't teach him anything. From the Tigers he went to the Red Sox in the Elmke deal, and Lee Fohl did more with him than Cobb. In two years, on and off, Babe never broke into a game with the Sox.

All this might lead one to believe that Herman has used up a good many summers in all his travels around the baseball world. But he didn't. At the age of twenty-three he has struck the right manager and the road to diamond fame.

Herman has unbounded confidence in himself, an invaluable asset to a ball player. He can't stand "riding," or even a mild reproof, if he has erred in some way. And, knowing that, Robbie doesn't even correct him. He suggests, and the Babe is wise enough to take hints from whence they come. If Herman fails to hit with men on bases Robbie doesn't growl, though he may be doing that inwardly.

"Better luck next time, Babe," usually is his only comment.

Robbie's careful handling has made Herman a star, as it did many others.

Organized Cheering Cut Out by Cornell Managers

There will be no organized cheering at future Cornell baseball games and track meets. Managers of the baseball and track teams have recommended the change.

The organized cheering edict affects only these two sports. It is understood that cheering at football and basketball games, wrestling meets and indoor track programs will continue.

W. W. Buckley, manager of baseball, said that the cheering at the Pennsylvania meet, described as "poor," led to the decision to dispense with organized outbursts for the remainder of the spring. He asserted that the order was not an official act of the student council, but that it had been discussed at a recent meeting of that body and that the consensus was that baseball and outdoor track could get along without it.

Masters Fadeaway

E. Garland Braxton of the New York Yankees pitching staff recently said he had mastered the fadeaway delivery that the late Christopher Mathewson made famous, and that he intended using the fadeaway in the American league. Braxton said he "got" the delivery after practicing for three years behind the barn on his father's farm with his brother, who caught him.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

Mahomet

IN THE early years of the Seventh century A. D., an Arabian peasant's epileptic son, Mahomet by name, announced that he was God's chosen mouthpiece to mankind and that he was also the promoter and high priest of a brand new religion. He backed these statements with a series of cataleptic trances and a few neat, hand-made miracles. Half-fanatic and half-charlatan, he succeeded in changing the map and history of the world.

Arabia and its surrounding countries, at the time of Mahomet's birth, were made up of small, comparatively unimportant states; some independent, some subject to Greece or Persia. They worshiped in an indifferent, half-hearted way a long list of gods, with Allah as the chief divinity. Mahomet within a brief lifetime converted the East to a religion known as Islam, plagiarized by him almost entirely from the Christian and Hebrew Scriptures. He had persuaded Orientals to regard their subsidiary gods as demons (for he was too politic to deny their alleged deities' existence), and to recognize Allah as the one true God. Had he stopped there, no great harm would have been done. But unfortunately he preached conquest (or "holy wars") as well as religion. The result was a series of conflicts stretching intermittently from 622 to 1898; and a united horde of fanatics who for centuries menaced the world's peace and progress.

Mahomet was left a penniless orphan when only three. He was reared in poverty, but in early manhood became a sort of commercial traveler for a business owned by a rich widow in Mecca. He soon after married the widow and became a power in his home city. He was afflicted with epileptic fits, which were followed by long swoons or trances. In these trances he claimed to hold communication with the Angel Gabriel and other divine messengers, who little by little taught him a creed which was to replace heathenism, and bade him proclaim the new teachings. These teachings, though declared wholly new, bore a startling resemblance to a hodge-podge of other and older religions. But many Orientals—a race who still regard the eccentrically insane with a sort of awed reverence—listened eagerly to him and assented to his claim that he was a prophet. He set forth his "revelations" in a book called the Koran.

How far Mahomet was sincere and how far a mere trickster can never be known. He had a strongly fanatical temperament and probably believed that certain heavenly revelations were made to him in visions. But he is shrewdly suspected of twisting his visions on occasions to suit his own desires or plans. A number of Meccans eagerly joined him; while the city government as strenuously opposed him. Finding he could make no great headway in his own city, he and his disciples, in 622 A. D., left Mecca and fled to Medina, an Arabian town where his doctrines had already taken root. Mahometan time dates from this "Hegira" (flight) of the prophet and his followers.

Having established himself at Medina, Mahomet straightway began collecting new recruits from the surrounding country, rolling up wealth and power for his cause, and combining earthly power with his so-called heavenly mission. He became, in a measure, a sort of medieval Dowry; forbidding his followers to say "Good morning" and forcing them to substitute "Peace be with you!" and performing countless acts of temporal expedience in the name of piety. His inspiration appealed to the fanatical temperament of the Arabs.

Working on the fiery, susceptible Arab nature, he made his subjects believe that if they died for their faith or while killing infidels, they would at once enter into a very gorgeous sort of heaven, whose delights included as many and as garish attractions as a seaside amusement park.

Having thus prepared his forces, working on the well-recognized plan that a fanatic is the most dangerous of foes, Mahomet declared the first "holy war." Oddly enough it chanced to be against the city of Mecca which had cast him out. Having conquered the Meccans he turned his attention to other "unbelievers," and had so far succeeded that he was threatening the Greek empire itself when, in 632 A. D., at the age of sixty-two, he died.

But he had set rolling a ball that could not be stopped. His successors, the caliphs ("representatives of the prophet"), extended the conquests of Mahometanism throughout Egypt, Syria, Palestine, Asia Minor, the Eastern empire and the Persian and Greek possessions. They even made Constantinople their capital and penetrated Spain, the Adriatic and other parts of Europe.

A new world power had sprung up in a single generation with fanaticism as its keynote. It could not be overthrown or weakened by any one man's death, by revolution or by any ordinary chain of circumstances.

It became a force to be reckoned with; a force whose ferocity and zeal have taxed the prowess of a thousand generals, from the earliest Crusaders down to Lord Kitchener; a force ever smoldering and awaiting only the opportunity to burst forth into fiercer, more destructive flame; a force that has ever been opposed to progress.

Insist That Frogs Arrived in Deluge

The government meteorological office in Washington gave scant credence to those Danville residents who said that it rained frogs. Officials said there had been several similar reports previously, but none of them had been proved.

North Danville residents, on the other hand, pointed to millions of black frogs as large as a man's finger-nail hopping about Bryant avenue. Small boys with cans and buckets collected them by the thousands. In some cases the frogs were shoveled from porches and walks. At six o'clock in the evening there were no frogs in sight. Following a tropical deluge at that hour, lasting a half hour, the streets and yards of that section of the city were thick with them. One theory was that the tiny frogs were brought out of hiding places by the heavy rain, but this was held unlikely by the absence of trees on the street.—Washington Post.

When the "Elocution Queen" Was Supreme

I think that elocutionism, as perpetrated by those who have taken lessons of our states, but it was almost sons, is now prohibited by law in an epidemic in the "seventies." Tall brunettes of intense personality, and always suffering from a slight cold, would travel from town to town and collect their victims into halls, and goose-pimple them with "Rum's Maniac," "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight," and "The Fall of the Perverse Mill." I can think of only one form of entertainment more devastating than the serious recitation given by the lady professional who bites her words, and that is the humorous or laugh-provoking selection attempted by the same type of performer.—George Ade, in Hearst's International Cosmopolitan.

Not Typewriting, Chemistry

A colored woman of ample proportions came into the office of Frederick E. Schortemeier, secretary of state, not long ago and inquired whether a position could be found for her daughter. She explained that the girl was a high school graduate.

"Can she do any typewriting?" the secretary asked.

"Oh, yes," replied the mother.

"I suppose she studied it in school?" Mr. Schortemeier asked.

"No, but she took chemistry," was the reply.—Indianapolis News.

Today.

There is a thing called yesterday, but that is only the dust-bait at the door, into which we cast our refuse, our failures, our worn-out souls. There is a thing called tomorrow, bursting with far better things than those which we have discarded. But in today the whole passionate force of the universe is poured—and therefore today is marvellous.—S. P. B. Mats.

New England Atmosphere With 1926 Improvements

ANY one who has ever motored through the quaint sleepy towns of New England has fallen in love with the small houses that abound in that section of the country—neat, white, unpretentious and with a touch of reserve about them. Just such a house is the one pictured here. It is equally adaptable for town or country, and by merely shifting around can be built on a wide or narrow lot without spoiling its architectural.

The house is sturdily built and has an exterior of wood siding except for the unusual stucco panels that start at the level of the second floor windows. The roof is of stained shingles, preferably moss green. In keeping with the window shutters. A house of this compact style is very easy to heat, especially when the specifications call for insulation throughout with celotex, which prevents heat leakage, and keeps the house cool in the summer.

The living and dining rooms are here combined into one large room flooded with light by windows on three sides. The two bedrooms on the second floor each have double exposure and an extra large closet in which a window may be placed.

TINLEY PARK

Mrs. Wm. Stelter, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Meech of Harvey and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mohr visited at the Arthur Stelter home last Sunday.

Upon returning home from their touring trip with Adam Schilling thru Wisconsin, Minnesota and S. Dakota, the Rev. Wm. Greve found that some one had entered their home and stole the contents of the children's saving bank and also his irreplaceable collection of rare and unusual stamps. The thief, if he reads these lines, is requested to return at least the stamps.

The work of laying the new water main extensions was finished Thursday. About one mile of new water mains were laid in two weeks. Tinley Park now has the best water works system and fire protection of any town of its size in the State. With the addition of the new chemical truck, the fire department is prepared to cope with any fire that may break out in the village or nearby territory.

Threshing is well under way in this section and will continue for another week or ten days.

TINLEY PARK M. E. CHURCH

Rev. Glen T. Beaty will preach Sunday at 11 A.M. The subject is: "The Victory That Counts." We invite YOU to join our fine group of summer worshippers.

Wm. Steinhauer of Minersville, Penn., who has been visiting with his brother-in-law, Geo. Schreiber, has returned to his home. It has been 24 years since they have seen each other. When Mr. Schreiber first came to this country from Germany he resided in Minersville and later came to Tinley Park. Mrs. Thoenig of Chicago Heights has been visiting with Tinley Park friends this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hartwig of Chicago Heights visited with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lorenz Wednesday. The new residence of Wm. Funk is nearing completion.

The congregation of Rev. Faundry's church of Chicago held their annual picnic in the Vogt's wood last Sunday.

Mrs. Geo. Schreiber is visiting in Chicago with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schreiber.

A Labor Day dance will be held at the Saenger hall Monday Sept. 6th in the evening only.

Mr. Dini has been kept busy making ice deliveries to the big railroad camp at Merley.

The annual picnic of the Zion Lutheran church will be held at Vogt's wood this Sunday. There will be games and sports. Everyone invited.

Services and Sunday school will be held as usual at the Zion church Sunday morning following which the congregation will go to the picnic grove.

Rev. Albert Buddenhagen of the Zion Lutheran church has been attending a meeting of the Iowa Synod at Dubuque, Iowa the past week. This body meets once in three years.

Rev. E.C. Barkow who has been spending several weeks with Rev. and Mrs. Buddenhagen has returned to his home in Swanville, Minn.

On Sept. 1st the Ladies Aid of the Zion church will hold their regular meeting. On Thursday Sept. 2nd the Luther League will hold their monthly meeting.

Quite extensive remodeling work has been done to the Zion church the past week. The steeple has been newly shingled. Arthur Keuch and Chas. Mafing did the carpenter work. While working on the steeple they had their pictures taken while on the top of the spire.

Mrs. Miller Gains 15 Pounds

"I was in an anemic and run-down condition. I had to force myself to eat. I took two bottles of Vinol and gained fifteen pounds. I feel stronger and have good appetite."—Mrs. Frank Miller, Patterson, N.J.

Nervous, rundown women, suffering from worry or overwork, need Vinol. It enriches the blood, improves the digestion and rebuilds the whole system. Women love the taste of this pleasant Cod Liver and Iron tonic without oil. Has stood the test of a quarter century.
